PROPOSING TO FORM AN INDEPENDENT PARTY

THE CONVENTION LAST NIGHT ONLY GETTING AS FAR AS ORGANIZATION AND CHARTER

The second conference of trade unions, called by the Independent Labor Union to decide what action to take in the present political crisis, met last evening at the Union room in Campleague Hall last evening 506 delegates, representing通行该制式, was one delegate for every 100 members. As the number of delegates was greater than the number of representatives, the delegates outnumbered the representatives by six. It appeared that there was a good deal of informal talk about the possibility of organizing a new party. Several speakers expressed a very strong feeling for independent political action and strong objections to the present Constitution of the Mechanics' Institute. Chairman Cartwright's cabinet fell.

The great meeting was held last night through the division of W. G. Clayes, an excellent economist, as Chairman of the temporary organization, and so Gillis, minister of the Proprietors at the Permanent Organization. This led to a lot of noise and consultation among the speakers and the meetings, started the oratory. He said the con- vention would be the occasion of a new beginning. Never in labor history had there been such an opportunity for organizing a political party running and dealing. It had been said by one man, the best since the first one, that the Trade Union was willing to spend enough money to win, no matter how much might be needed. Labor, he said, was the only party in the country that could represent the working class, and that he would have to stand and fight for himself.

Mr. Archibald said he spoke in this way because he wanted to make it clear that the Trades Union had a right to demand more than just the organization of a political party. He said that he would not be satisfied with mere the nature of the meeting, and that what better might happen the move in the direction of a political party? He said that the Trades Union should be the leader of the movement and that the good results would follow. He said that the Trades Union should take a positive position in the political struggle and not to do anything that would stand in the way of the development of the party. He said that the Trades Union should be the leader of the movement and that what better might happen the move in the direction of a political party? He said that the Trades Union should take a positive position in the political struggle and not to do anything that would stand in the way of the development of the party. He said that the Trades Union should be the leader of the movement and that what better might happen the move in the direction of a political party? He said that the Trades Union should take a positive position in the political struggle and not to do anything that would stand in the way of the development of the party.

WHEN nomina tions were declared in order it was understood that Mr. Archibald was nominating himself as the first name of the candidates before the convention. About 200 votes were necessary to secure election, and the number of votes that would be given to Mr. Archibald in his favor was very much in doubt. He said that he would only receive the highest votes that would be given to him as a candidate for the post of the office that was to be filled. If he received the highest votes, he would be elected. If he did not receive the highest votes, he would not be elected.

While the candidates were at work, Mr. Archibald and his friends met in the Union hall for a letter he wrote lately to Typographical Union. He said that he had not been satisfied with the results of the work that he had been doing. He said that he had been disappointed to find that the work that he had been doing had not been satisfactory. He said that he had been pleased to find that the work that he had been doing had been satisfactory. He said that he had been surprised that the work that he had been doing had been satisfactory. He said that he had been pleased to find that the work that he had been doing had been satisfactory. He said that he had been surprised that the work that he had been doing had been satisfactory. He said that he had been pleased to find that the work that he had been doing had been satisfactory. He said that he had been surprised that the work that he had been doing had been satisfactory. He said that he had been pleased to find that the work that he had been doing had been satisfactory. He said that he had been surprised that the work that he had been doing had been satisfactory. He said that he had been pleased to find that the work that he had been doing had been satisfactory.