A MIGHTY STRUGGLE AHEAD

CAPITAL AND LABOR TO JOIN IN BATTLE TO-DAY.

The laboring men of this city and the neighboring towns who are in the employ of the magnates of capital, and the owners of the machinery, have in common a problem which they must all try to solve if they would secure the permanent peace and prosperity of the community. It is this: What course should they pursue to prevent the perpetuation of a system of oppression which has brought them to the verge of insurrection? The laboring men are now determined to make every effort to secure the adoption of a system of wages that will enable them to live decently and comfortably.

The owners of capital are determined to maintain the present system of wages, which is based on the principle that the laboring man is the property of the capitalist, and that he should be paid the smallest amount that will enable him to subsist.

The laboring men are determined to make every effort to secure the adoption of a system of wages that will enable them to live decently and comfortably. They believe that the present system of wages is unjust and oppressive, and that it is the cause of the frequent strikes and disturbances that have taken place in the city.

The owners of capital are determined to maintain the present system of wages, which is based on the principle that the laboring man is the property of the capitalist, and that he should be paid the smallest amount that will enable him to subsist.

The laboring men are determined to make every effort to secure the adoption of a system of wages that will enable them to live decently and comfortably. They believe that the present system of wages is unjust and oppressive, and that it is the cause of the frequent strikes and disturbances that have taken place in the city.

The owners of capital are determined to maintain the present system of wages, which is based on the principle that the laboring man is the property of the capitalist, and that he should be paid the smallest amount that will enable him to subsist.

The laboring men are determined to make every effort to secure the adoption of a system of wages that will enable them to live decently and comfortably. They believe that the present system of wages is unjust and oppressive, and that it is the cause of the frequent strikes and disturbances that have taken place in the city.

The owners of capital are determined to maintain the present system of wages, which is based on the principle that the laboring man is the property of the capitalist, and that he should be paid the smallest amount that will enable him to subsist.