Many People Celebrate at Redondo.

Over Twenty Organizations are Represented.

A Talk in the East of Labor Organizations, Passed from Street Car and Other Assistants—Do Days' Feast.

The celebration of Labor Day, which took the form of an excursion to Redondo, was sponsored by the Federation of Labor. The day was expected and conducted by the C.W. Stoneman, who was selected to address the crowd. A large group of people assembled in the center of the city, and Stoneman was chosen as the speaker of the evening. In his address, he spoke about the importance of the day and the need for labor to work together to achieve their goals. The event also included a parade of various labor organizations, each representing different sectors of the city. The parade was led by the C.W. Stoneman, who rode a horse and carried a large banner. The procession included workers from various industries, such as manufacturing, transportation, and construction. The parade route included the streets of downtown Los Angeles, and it was a sight to see the large crowds of people gathering to celebrate the day. The event was a success, and it was a great day for the labor movement in Los Angeles.
